Dance

Since ancient times, people have danced. Cave and rock paintings from as far back as 3300 B.C. show people dancing. People have danced for ritual, for celebration, and also just for fun!

Every culture has its own dance styles, and its own reasons for dancing. In ancient Greece, citizens would dance to honor gods and celebrate events. Ancient Egyptian women danced at funerals to express sadness. It was around Renaissance times that dance became something that people did for enjoyment.

In the 1600s, King Louis XIV of France enjoyed ballet, which helped make it popular with the public. Pretty soon, people were going to the theater to watch people dance, and it became into a true performing art. Now, there are all different styles of dance, from jazz to tap to hip-hop to salsa...and that's just in the Western world. All over the globe, there are countless styles of dancing, and countless reasons for it.

Make up a dance to a favorite song. Draw each step in the boxes below.

Alvin Ailey

Alvin Ailey was a dancer and choreographer. A choreographer is someone who plans the movements that will happen in a dance. He helped change modern dance and created one of the most famous dance companies in the world. Most importantly, he paved the way for African Americans in the arts.

Alvin was born in Texas in 1931. When Alvin was 11, he and his mother moved to Los Angeles. She wanted to find work and leave the South. The South was segregated at that time. In Los Angeles, Alvin became interested in dance. His friend introduced him to a dance teacher named Lester Horton. He took classes with Lester, but wasn't sure if he wanted to pursue dance or go on to college. He moved to San Francisco in 1951, where he met a woman named Marguerite Johnson. She later changed her name to Maya Angelou and became a famous writer. Marguerite was a dancer, and the two performed around town. Alvin soon moved back to Los Angeles. There, he studied dance full-time.

In 1953, he began performing with his friend Lester's dance company. He danced in many Hollywood movies. However, later that year, Lester died suddenly. Alvin became the new director of the dance company and dedicated their first piece to his friend and teacher.

The next year, he was invited to New York to perform in a Broadway show. There, he found the dance world strange and constricting. He felt it lacked the passion and freedom that he loved so much about dance. He decided to start his own dance company. He named it the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater. The dances he choreographed for the company were modern. They also used typical African American dance styles like jazz and blues, as well as traditional African dancing. Drawing on his experiences growing up in the South, his dances often evoked African American struggles. For the first few years, the company was made up of only African Americans. As time went on, it began to include people from all different backgrounds. Alvin prided himself on hiring dancers based on their talent, and not the color of their skin.

Alvin continued his work with his dance company, and also opened schools. He started programs that offered dance and arts classes to people from all backgrounds. He was awarded the Kennedy Center Honors in 1988. He died in 1989. The Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater continues to entertain people all around the world to this day.
